

CEEP Fellows Overview

What is the Fellowship program?

CEEP Fellows are students who help carry out our approaches on the ground. CEEP offers two types of Fellowships: Engagement and Institutional.

Engagement Fellows organize a variety of direct engagement events where they register their peers to vote, navigate them through daunting voting rules, distribute our nonpartisan candidate guides and other educational materials, and organize and carry out get out the vote events. Institutional Fellows, meanwhile, work on a project to institutionalize voter engagement efforts on their campus, in addition to some direct engagement events.

What does the Fellowship entail?

We recruit Fellows through our existing network and provide training and coaching to Fellows along the way. Fellows receive training from CEEP on the following topics:

- Voter Registration and Being Nonpartisan
- Voter Registration and Education Best Practices
- Get Out the Vote
- Effective Tabling Strategies
- Social Media and Branding

To help Fellows plan and execute their work, CEEP State Directors provide additional support and combine one-on-one phone calls with group meetings. State Directors connect Fellows with campus staff, administrators and faculty to help carry out the work as well.

What have your Fellows accomplished?

Many Fellows have called this experience “life-changing” and “the most powerful thing I’ve done in my life.” Here are a few examples:

- One of our Michigan Fellows registered nearly 300 students to vote at an annual National Voter Registration Day event.
- One of our Iowa Fellows registered over 800 students to vote in one week.
- One of our former Virginia Fellows, now a University of Pennsylvania law school graduate, helped write our Supreme Court guides.

The conversations Fellows had across the political spectrum gave them “insight into what it really takes to keep a democracy on a healthy path.”

We’re looking to our partners and allies to help co-sponsor and fund Fellows.

(CEEP will recruit the Fellows and provide training, coaching and supervision.)

Co-sponsoring Fellows is a great way to maximize the impact they have on their campus.
